Homeopathic healing with realm of Imponderables

Dr Kavitha Kukunoor
CCH, RS Hom (NAL, C.H, BHMS)

Salute to Dr Samuel Hahnemann, Founder of Homeopathy: Divine art of healing.

Imponderables (direct physical energy medicines) are immaterial dynamic energies that are utilized as potentized homeopathic medicines for the cure of sick. Colour & Sound remedies work at a physical, emotional, mental, and spiritual levels to heal the physical body, stabilize the emotions and provide mental clarity. They are based on each Chakra's vibrational affinity to a particular colour and sound of musical notes.

Chakra is a Sanskrit word means wheel. The Chakras correspond to the spinal plexuses in the physical body from which nerves branch out to provide energy to different parts of the body. The 7 chakras are the energy centres in our body through which energy flows.

- ROOT CHAKRA -represents our foundation and feeling of being grounded also called as MULADHARA or COCCYX CENTRE.
- SACRAL CHAKRA - our connections and ability to accept others and new experiences, it is also called SWADHITHANA.
- SOLAR PLEXUS CHAKRA -represents our ability to be confident and in control of our lives.
- HEART CHAKRA -our ability to love , joy , inner peace.
- THROAT CHAKRA -the VISHUDDHA or cerical centre from which nerves radiate to the throat, neck and vocal chords.

- THIRD EYE CHAKRA -highest centre located in medulla oblongata, through which cosmic energy feeds the entire body with prana.
- CROWN CHAKRA -located in the cranium at top of head, traditionally called as thousand petalled plexus or crown chakra, represents our ability to be fully connected spiritually.

Dr. Ambika Wastens, Homopath who developed homeopathic Colour and Sound remedies in 1990. She is the founder of Life Energy Medicine. 10 colour remedies are: Red, Orange, Yellow, Green, Pink, Indigo blue, Turquoise, Violet, Spectrum and Magenta. Colour & Sound Remedies are prepared in the same way like any other homeopathic remedy.

Mudras are hand gestures that direct the flow of energy to the body and it will be effective if we make positive affirmations during meditation that stimulates the particular Chakra.

Sensation Refined

By Dr. Rajan Sankaran, Hardcover, 432 pages, $95.00, ISBN-978-81-903378-7-8, Printed in India

Reviewed by Kavitha Kukunoor, RSHom (NA), CCH, BHMS

The Sensation Method grew from Dr. Sankaran's understanding of the energy patterns of homeopathic remedies and how they relate to the energy patterns of human beings. It is as if two songs are playing in the same person. I.e., the human and non-human energy patterns that correspond to the energy patterns of plants, minerals and animals. The song of the remedy will appear in the language of its kingdom—resembling sensitivity in the Plant Kingdom, survival in the Animal Kingdom and structure in the Mineral Kingdom. In this text we see the evolution of the author's ideas since publishing The Sensation in Homeopathy, consolidating the concepts described therein. As the title suggests, we savor the refinement of the ideas in his earlier works, in an attempt to make the Sensation Method more effective, consistent and finally, to achieve success with greater ease.

The first half of the book reviews and expands on the basic principles of the Sensation Method through several examples and different methods for identifying the sensation. The second half is concerned with its application and actual case-taking process. This text is an excellent teaching tool for those already familiar with the Sensation Method and those who are beginning to explore it.

Dr. Sankaran emphasizes the chief complaint since the physical expression of disease is the crystallization of the general vital disturbance. He states that one needs to focus on the energy pattern through hand gestures associated with the chief complaint. He uses the example of a woman whose chief complaint was depression who kept folding and unfolding a napkin. Dr. Sankaran asked, "What is this you are doing? Patient: 'This! This is confusion...' and this is clarity." Dr. Sankaran: "Can you talk about confusion and clarity?" ... and the whole case opened up! (P. 27)

He advises us to let the patient lead and this happens best when we merely say, "Tell me more about..." which has no direction and takes the patient to all of the levels of experience. The sensation is always with the patient—it is present and continuous—so Dr. Sankaran insists that we keep the patient in the present—in the sensation level—even if the experience was in the past. Once the sensation is clear, focus only on the sublevels of sensation, etc. Dr. Sankaran cautions us that when we hear pure "source words," at the sensation level, we are not supposed to look for a remedy there. These words have to be seen in the context of kingdoms and subkingdoms. He discloses that the intention is the place to find "source words."

Dr. Sankaran explains how the patient moves from the local sensation of the complaint to the corresponding general sensation. He points to "source words," which when verified at all levels, lead to the universal experience of the individual. This directs the homopath to the deeper acting simillimum. The fundamental idea is that the remedy is curative when it is given based on the patient's deepest level of experience—the "Vital Sensation."

"Sensation is deeper than emotion or delusion, experienced in the mind & body simultaneously." (P. 77)

In Sensation Refined, Dr. Sankaran elaborates on the "Seven Levels of Experience," his central thesis. Potencies that correspond to levels of the disease state are explained in a detailed manner. He also discusses LM potencies and how they relate to the corresponding level.

"The potency is selected according to the level that is experienced daily by the patient." (P. 117)

This book provides the homopath with a technique of case-taking, analysis, prescribing and long-term case management, knowledge of remedies and an understanding of how this system relates to the fundamental principles of nature. Using this in conjunction with Dr. Sankaran's system of miasms and kingdoms makes an effective system of homeopathic practice.

Dr. Sankaran's system of miasms and kingdoms makes an effective system of homeopathic practice.

Sam's Story: A Boy on the Autistic Spectrum

How homeopathy helped him become calm and harmonized into his family

By KAVITHA KUKUNOOR, CCH, RSHOM (NA), CCH, BHMS

Sam was brought to my clinic by his mother in October 2018, two months before his fifth birthday. He had been diagnosed by a primary care physician with Autism Spectrum Disorder.

Sam had started withdrawing socially at age two and a half years, eight after his sister Jally was born. His mother said that Sam "did not like his sister" especially the sounds she made. He would become irritable whenever she cried. He also seemed devoid of attention given to him.

Sam's mother described him as cranky and difficult to manage. He cried and screamed very loudly with high, piercing tones that caught everyone's attention. He was restless, always on the move, and had difficulty sitting in one place. He made no eye contact and did not respond to commands. When angry, he started throwing things, he was sure of loud noises and started wailing. He was partially toilet trained, having accidents mainly when outdoors.

At about five years old, he had not started speaking at all, so he was seeing a speech therapist. He was also enrolled in occupational therapy and special education class.

Sam had a voracious appetite, especially when he was recovering from bouts of illness. About once a month and lasting for about a week, he would have an episode of waking up hungry, cranky, and gassy at 3:00 a.m. When he was given something to eat, he immediately had a bowel movement.

Sam's preferred foods and drinks were chips and other junk food, tea, and coffee. He liked his food warm.

During her first pregnancy, Sam's mother was lying far apart from family support. She said she felt very lonely and lousy during this time because she had nothing to do while her husband was at work. She preferred to speak to someone and do some company. She ate a lot during this time, and her appetite was insatiable.

Choosing a remedy
I researched the following symptoms, using MacRepertory software and The Complete Repertory:

- Mind, restlessness, nervousness, children in
- Mind, restless, irritable
- Stomach, appetite, insatiable
- Genesities, food and drink, warm, food, desires
- Genesities, food and drink, tea, desires

The remedies that ranked highest in the repertorization were Amnium, Saccharum album, Lycodium and Fernambuco (Figure 1).

Sam's sweet remedy
The remedy that was common to this rubric and the earlier repertorization was Saccharum officinale, the homeopathic remedy prepared from highly refined and succinated cane sugar. I chose Saccharum officinale 200C for Sam and he took this every four weeks, using the following protocol: dissolve three to four pills in 100-150 ml of water, shake five times for 10-15 seconds, and give Sam one ounce of this liquid every six to eight hours.

Symptoms listed in the materia medica for this remedy include violent temper, irritable, quarrelsome, dirty, capricious, cross and whimsical, bowels, painful, worms, itchy, and reduces substantial food. Other Saccharum officinale symptoms that fit Sam include restlessness, nervousness, jealousy

Remedy	Amnium	Saccharum album	Lycodium	Fernambuco
mind, restlessness, nervousness, children in	4	3	2	1
mind, restless, irritable	3	2	1	0
stomach, appetite, insatiable	2	1	0	0

Also consulted Reference of the Materia Medica for "Symptoms developing after the birth of a sibling."

This was the main rubric used for Sam, since his mother clearly indicated that his regression had begun following his sister's birth. Only a few remedies are listed for this symptom—Baryta carbonica, Ipsosia, Saccharum officinale (Saccharum album), and Sepia.

In children, and insatiable appetite (which also fit Sam's mother when she was pregnant with him).

The sugarcane plant is a monocotyledon, the smaller and more ancient of the two divisions in the plant kingdom. Monocot plants typically have elongated, stalkless leaves with parallel veins, such as grasses, palms, and lilies. According to analyses by homeopaths Michael Yark,
